

Steve Rogers

Steve Rogers work is best described as marine art. He has always been fascinated by boats, the ocean and the coastal marshes. He loves the structure inherent in the design of a ship, or the docks and warehouses of a working waterfront. So much of what we see today of our marine heritage is slowly fading away under the irresistible and relentless pressure of development. His work is simply a small effort to preserve some memories of what used to be for those who remember fondly, and those who are unaware of what life was like only a few short decades ago. His paintings reflect the recognition, admiration, and respect for the lives and work of the watermen.

Steve Rogers AWS, NWS, TWSA has served as a Judge/Juror for many watercolor exhibitions including American Watercolor Society, where he was the National Invited Juror in 2007 and served that year on the jury of selection. Steve was the Chairman of the three person Jury of Awards for AWS in 2010. And the Transparent Watercolor Society of America, 2015, where he was a member of the two person Jury of Selection and he was Sole Awards Judge.
